“Demographic Shifts and US Foreign Policy”

Major demographic changes are taking place in the Western alliance as some of the United States' key allies have increasingly aging and diverse populations. In the United States, the demographic shift is viewed primarily from the lens of domestic politics but it will, most likely, have a significant impact on US foreign policy and military strategy. The talk will discuss how the demographic shifts in the western alliance and in the United States may bring about major changes in the way the United States looks at the world and interacts with it.

Dr. Amit Gupta is an Associate Professor in the USAF Air War College, Alabama. His writings have focused on arms production and weapons proliferation, South Asian and Australian security policies, Diaspora politics and, more recently, on the US-China rivalry and the impact of demography on US foreign policy. He also writes on popular culture and politics.

His articles have appeared in Orbis, Asian Survey, Security Dialogue, The Round Table, and Mediterranean Quarterly. He is also the author or editor of five books the most recent of which is Global Security Watch-India. His latest edited book is on Maritime Strategies in the Indian Ocean and Western Pacific and will be published by Routledge in 2017.
